

FBI Probing Escape Plot On Alcatraz; Five Are Dead

San Francisco, May 6 (P)—The FBI moved into Alcatraz today to collect evidence against three survivors of the half-dozen convicts whose desperate, vain break for freedom brought a bloody, 36-hour siege of their cell-block and left five men dead and 15 wounded.

Not a single prisoner escaped.

The three may yet die—in San Quentin's green-painted gas chamber.

"There is a good chance that evidence will be sufficient to indict the surviving participants for murder," asserted U. S. Attorney Daniel C. Deasy—and if it is, he said, the death penalty will be demanded.

Had Only Two Guns

Despite the fact that there were only two guns in the entire group involved in the furious battle, he added, "where one or more participants actually killed someone, the others would be part of that conspiracy, and could be charged with murder."

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is taking statements from other prisoners as well as from guards, Deasy reported, and "the matter will be presented to the Federal Grand Jury here."

The three surviving participants, said Warden James A. Johnston, were Sam Shockey, 36, serving a life term for kidnapping and robbery in Oklahoma; Miran Edgar Thompson, 29, serving 99 years for kidnapping and life for killing a Texas policeman; and Clarence Carnes, 19, Oklahoma desperado serving 99 years for kidnapping and murder.

Find Three Bodies

Guards broke into the last dark utility corridor of the embattled prison wing Saturday to find the bodies of three others.

Bernard Coy, 46, spy little Louisville, Ky., bank robber who started the uprising by clambering up to a third-floor guard's gallery and forcing his way into it to slug and disarm guard Bert Burch, was defiant to the last. Death caught him with arms extended as though still gripping the rifle he had seized from the guard.

Also dead in the narrow, pipe-filled passageway were:

Joseph Paul Cretzer, 35, Los Angeles bank robber who had assumed command and carried on the fight furiously, despite his quick conclusion that the break had failed and "we're as far from San Francisco as ever!"

Battle Is Over

Official Fears, Tempers Mount On Coal Strike

Washington, May 6 (P)—The coal strike which President Truman described as a "national disaster" stretched into its sixth week today with official fears and congressional tempers both mounting.

As John L. Lewis prepared to resume his "silent treatment" of the bituminous operators, Congress made its first tentative move toward stepping into the dispute.

A House Judiciary subcommittee scheduled hearings on a bill to outlaw any form of special production payments to unions. Such a law, if passed, would strike down Lewis's No. 1 demand—for a health and welfare fund for his miners.

Lewis held his own counsel on this maneuver as well as Mr. Truman's week-end report warning that the full impact of the strike has only "barely begun" to be felt.

May Offer Compromise

Even before that document was made public, the Senate heard several of its members demand government action to reopen the mines.

Later, Senator Ellender (D-La.) told reporters he thought the report "could well mean that the White House is preparing the public for the necessary steps of seizure."

Seizure, however, was not being mentioned seriously among Labor department officials as a likely next step—for the big reason, they said privately, that the government has no assurances that the 400,000 idle miners would return to their jobs even then.

What is expected first, instead, is some government suggestion or possible compromise proposals which might form the basis for real collective bargaining between Lewis and the operators.

GI BARRACKS FOR VETS HERE READY BY SEPT. 1

The dormitories housing 200 students and ten GI families to be constructed by the Federal Public Housing Authority on the Gettysburg college campus will be completed in time for the beginning of the fall semester, provided kitchen and lavatory installations can be secured, James R. Lee, assistant to the Commissioner for the Federal Public Housing Administration, Washington, told The Gettysburg Times today.

At the same time Doctor Henry W. A. Hanson, president of the college, announced that the buildings will not be utilized entirely by GI students.

"We plan to adopt a new method in which there will be no segregation of the veteran students," Doctor Hanson said, "the veteran student should not be prevented from having a full share in campus activities and should not be made to feel that he is not a full part of the college."

To Mix Students

"For that reason we are planning, if possible, to place the barracks provided by the Federal Public Housing Authority on the campus among the other buildings. And we plan to have no separate housing for the veterans. In that way both veterans and non-veteran students will use the barracks and veteran and non-veteran students will be in the other dormitories here. We believe that such a system will give the veteran student much more in the way of campus life than if he were segregated to some all-veteran section."

The size and type of building to be erected by the FPHA at Gettysburg college will depend on what type of army structures are available near here, Lee said. The FPHA prefers to secure one story medium size barracks from the army to be converted for veteran student housing. Lee added, but the type used will depend entirely on what is available. When the structures are located they will be dismantled and shipped to Gettysburg.

Leased To College

Queried by The Gettysburg Times on the type and size of barracks to be used, Lee asked if there had been an army camp at Gettysburg.

When told of the Camp Sharpe installation here he said that possibly an attempt would be made to secure some of the barracks there for the project. Other possible places from which the barracks may be brought include Indiantown Gap, New Cumberland and Camp Ritchie, provided plans can be worked out to obtain them.

The 10 temporary family dwelling units each will consist of two rooms, bath and kitchen, and ordinarily three units can be made in each medium sized one-story barracks, Lee added.

The college will provide the site for the structures and will have the job of bringing utility connections to the site, Lee said. After the structures are completed the college operates them on lease from the government with the understanding that the structures are only temporary, Lee said.

EXPECT 500,000 TO VISIT FIELD DURING SEASON

Gettysburg has resumed its pre-war position as a mecca for tourists from throughout the nation.

That was the conclusion reached today by National Park and Cemetery officials who studied the recapitulation of tourist visitation for the month of April and tallied the number of tourists who visited the park Sunday.

An estimated 40,000 visitors came to the battlefield during April, compared with 38,000 for the same month in 1940 before war-time restrictions went into effect.

Sunday the visitation figures continued to remain high, with 68 tours made by guides with an estimated 1,900 persons visiting the field.

Expect 200,000

During the month of April, according to the calculations of National Cemetery Superintendent Edwin Baker, 1,373 guided tours were conducted over the field. Seventy-two of the tours were by bus. From those figures the park service estimating that about four persons are in every car and that for every guided tour there are seven non-guided visitors, arrived at the total of 40,000 tourists for the month.

The number is more than ten times greater than for April, 1945, when only 101 tours were made and an estimated 3,000 persons visited the battlefield.

If present visitations continue park officials believe that nearly 500,000 persons may visit the field during the tourist season this summer and fall.

While the rains Saturday kept tourist travel at a minimum, Sunday brought forth once again the Sunday parade of motorists with state police stating that traffic was heavy on all highways.

Twenty-six children received their first Holy Communion Sunday morning at the 9 o'clock mass at St. Francis Xavier Catholic church. Sunday evening they renewed their baptismal vows and were received into the scapular at a service held at 7 o'clock in the church.

The Rev. Fr. Mark E. Stock, pastor of the church, spoke briefly to the children during the mass, outlining to them the nature of Holy Communion.

Four students at St. Francis Xavier school were candlebearers, leading the white clad boys and girls in a procession from the school to the church prior to the mass and leading them to the altar at Communion time. The youngsters went up two by two to the top step of the altar base to receive Communion given them by the Rev. Father Stock. The girls wore long white veils in addition to their white dresses and shoes.

Foreign Ministers To Probe Treaties With Balkan States

Paris, May 6 (P)—Deadlocked on the Italo-Yugoslav frontier issue, the foreign ministers council instructed its deputies today to start examination of the Balkan treaties, beginning with Romania, an American informant said.

The four ministers of Russia, Britain, France and the United States reviewed their position on the Italian treaty and found the question of Trieste and Italian-Yugoslav frontier was the key difficulty. Thereupon U. S. Secretary of State Byrnes proposed that the deputies be instructed to start work on Balkan treaties.

Neither the Americans nor the Russians would budge from their stands on the Italian treaty at the meeting today.

The U. S. Secretary told his three colleagues, the informant said, that he was willing to accept either the proposed British or French frontier lines between Italy and Yugoslavia but that acceptance of the Russian

New Petitions Urge Jail Site At County Home

Petitions are being circulated in Gettysburg today requesting the county commissioners to locate the proposed new Adams county jail on the Bigerville road adjacent to the county home.

"The undersigned heartily endorse the site for the new Adams county prison on property already owned by the county on the Bigerville road near the county home," the petitions, addressed to the county commissioners, set forth.

"We feel that it is more economical to build on property owned by the county than to purchase another site," they continue. "The prisoners will be able to work in the gardens at the poor farm and raise most of their food. Public utilities are near and can be installed at one-half or less the figures quoted by the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce."

"Transportation of prisoners to the court house four times a year will cost the county only eight cents per mile," the petitions conclude.

Troop C, Adams county unit of the State Guard, has been notified that the 15-day field training period scheduled for this summer at Indiantown Gap has been cancelled because of the impending reorganization of the Guard.

Plans for a 2,000-man unit in the Pennsylvania Guard will not affect the mechanized cavalry unit here, it has been disclosed by the Department of Military Affairs at Harrisburg. Three infantry regiments will be disbanded and two others will be re-organized. About 3,000 men will remain in the re-organized home-defense force, Brig. Gen. Robert M. Vail, the adjutant general, said at Indiantown Gap.

Most of the changes will take place May 15. Infantry units at Chester, Doylestown, Norristown, Pottsville, Sunbury, Allentown, Bethlehem, Lebanon, Pottstown and Indiana are affected by the new order. The 4th and 16th Infantry regiments will be reorganized and continued. The 1st, 2nd and 10th Infantry regiments are abolished.

The troop drove 14 pieces of mechanized equipment to Carlisle, Shippensburg, Chambersburg, Caledonia and back to Gettysburg. At Caledonia, the unit stopped for mess and a softball game between the varsity and scrub teams.

Capt. C. Arthur Brame, troop commander, was in charge of the training-maneuver.

If the call is accepted, it is expected Rev. Reynolds will come to Littlestown about June 1.

OFFICIALS AID SCHOOL BOARDS ON NEW BUDGET

Representatives of the office of the county superintendent of schools have concluded a series of meetings with nine Adams county school boards, in assisting the latter in making up their new budget estimates, and plan meetings in the near future with other school boards for the same purpose, as they are requested.

Both Superintendent J. Floyd Slaybaugh and Assistant Superintendent Robert A. Bream have met with the school boards thus far assisted. The latter include Ardentville borough and Ardentville vocational, Berwick, Cumberland, Hamilton, Hamiltonban, Highland, Mt. Joy and Straban township boards.

These officials have worked with school boards in preparing estimates on reimbursements in accordance with the new school act. Act 403 of the 1945 General Assembly provides a new basis for determining the amount of state appropriation. Dr. Bream said today. The basis is the number in average daily membership rather than the number of teachers employed.

Instead of the districts being classified as 50, 60 or 75 per cent districts depending upon their true valuation per teacher, they will now have determined a standard reimbursement fraction depending upon the number of district pupils in average daily membership, the assessed valuation of property and the equalization level stated in the act, he said. This fraction will be used in determining the amount of appropriation on account of instruction, transportation, high school tuition and home-bound instruction.

Among the other speakers scheduled for the session are Dr. B. Elizabeth Herbert, Columbia physician; Sister Ann Joseph, field supervisor of the Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Harrisburg, and the Rev. Lawrence F. Schott, moderator of the NCCW-USO at Harrisburg. Representatives from the eight councils of the NCCW in Adams county and from the Catholic Mothers' club here are planning to attend the session.

Two persons were injured and property damage totalled $2,150. Three arrests were made.

Injured were Julius Formanont, 45, Conshohocken, Pa., and his daughter Miss Ruth Formanont, 17, same address. Formanont suffered a fractured right leg, while his daughter suffered a fractured right leg and left wrist. Both are patients at the Warner hospital.

The two were driving east on the Gettysburg-Fairfield road, four miles west of Gettysburg at 1:15 o'clock Sunday afternoon when the right front tire of their 1941 car blew out. The car swerved, striking a concrete culvert. Damage to the car was estimated at $1,000 and to the culvert, $25.

Kuhn, Conewago township justice of the peace with failure to yield one-half of the highway to oncoming traffic as a result of the accident. Police say Dettler was driving south on a curve and sideswiped cars being driven north by Howard Snyder, Littlestown and William Kroh, Westminster. Total damage was $250.

George Banner, Jr. 17, Newland, N. C., driving a truck owned by Fred Taylor, also of Newland, Saturday morning, fell asleep while on the Lincoln highway five miles east of Gettysburg. The truck, unguided, ran into a three foot ditch along the side of the highway and overturned. Damage was estimated at $800. Banner was uninjured.

Sideswipe On Bridge

Two cars sideswiped Saturday afternoon about 12:05 o'clock on the old stone arch bridge on the Fairfield road about two miles west of here but no occupants were injured. Damage was estimated at about $75.

State police here, who investigated, said that Walter Klessing, Iron Springs R. 1, was traveling toward Gettysburg, and Franklin B. Cluck, Gettysburg R. 2, was headed west when the left fronts of their machines were damaged in a collision at the crest of the bridge. Damage to the Iron Springs car was placed at about $40. Cluck's damage was estimated by police at about $35.

The police said both drivers will be charged before Justice of the Peace John H. Basehore with reckless driving.

A conference for children's workers and parents was led by Mrs. Lloyd Garretson, Ardentville, an officer of the county association. She was assisted by Cyrus Bucher, Biglerville, first district president. Doctor Putman led a conference for young people and adults.

CRISIS STEMS FROM ZONES OF INFLUENCE

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

If we had to compose a lament to express the woes of the current international conferences — security council of the United Nations and Big Four foreign ministers' parley alike — the strain most certainly would keep repeating "zones of influence" with the persistence of a phonograph record that has the needle stuck in one groove.

Virtually all the vexatious problems of the moment are related to realignment of the zones of influence of the great powers. There are the Russo-Iranian and Spanish questions before the security council, the Palestine imbroglio, the trouble-breeding Italian peace treaty which involves the vastly important Mediterranean area, and numerous equally grave issues in the orient.

Every one of these crises involves Russia. However, that isn't strange for that mighty union, impelled by its war-born prestige, has been moving with the inevitability of a tidal wave towards new boundaries of influence. A very considerable expansion was generally expected by the world at large, and the other allies conceded it without much question in many instances at the outset.

Pronounced Differences
However, passing time has brought no slackening in Moscow's drive. And because of this the western allies are gravely concerned over the limits of the Soviet union's intentions. What goal has it really set for itself? Does it, for instance, contemplate the complete domination of the eastern hemisphere, both Europe and Asia? Those are questions which must be answered. And, of course, Russia has made it clear she thinks the Anglo-American allies are trying to stymie her legitimate ambitions. That point has to be cleared up too.

The differences in viewpoint between Russia on the one hand and the western allies on the other have become so pronounced that small powers are taking advantage of the divergence. We see this well illustrated in the Palestine crisis. The Arab league, comprising several Arabian states which are neighbors of Palestine, are reported to be planning to send a delegation to Moscow to ask that Russia support the Arabs in Palestine against the Anglo-American inquiry committee report which inter alia calls for the immediate immigration of 100,000 more Jews into the Holy Land.

Whether the Arabs actually appeal to Moscow is beside the point. The important thing is that they have been inspired to consider such action because of the division among the Big Three.

"Zones of influence" are one of the trouble-makers which we shall get rid of when we finally achieve our Utopian world. They've helped a lot of wars through the centuries.

6 Youths Arraigned In Shooting Case

As a result of the accidental shooting of Robert Kress, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kress, Littlestown, last Sunday at Natural Dam, six county youths will appear before the county juvenile court on firearms charges, state police said today.

The officers, in announcing the results of their investigation into the shooting, warned all youths and adults in the county to investigate the laws governing the use and handling of guns, before attempting to use them. There are requirements governing the setting up and use of targets, there are regulations which forbid youngsters to handle a gun unless accompanied by adults. Because of the danger from the weapons the laws are stringent in order to provide for the public safety, police said.

State police today also warned those who have been firing rifles along Marsh Creek at Marsh Creek Heights and at the quarry along the Bonneville road that prosecution may follow. A number of complaints have been received from individuals living nearby that bullets were ricocheting near their homes, police said.

Further Cuts In Steel Production

Pittsburgh, May 6 (AP)—Shrinkage of coal supplies, unrepurchased since start of the soft coal strike April 1, today caused a further slump in Pittsburgh district steel-making operations.

Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, U. S. Steel corporation's biggest subsidiary, slated operation this week at a sparse nine per cent of capacity, lower than at any point during the bottom depression year of 1932.

Carnegie-Illinois officials said their Clairton, Duquesne and Vandergrift works would shut down completely today. The closings affect 5,000 workers at Clairton, 6,800 at Duquesne and 2,600 at Vandergrift.

The largest of the three U. S. Steel plants at Youngstown, the Ohio works, also closes today.

Faper single-service containers for milk were patented in 1906.

Johnson claimed the Senate floor to oppose the measure as administration leaders waited impatiently for a break in debate they hope will bring a showdown vote this week.

RECORD CROWD SEES ASSAULT CAPTURE DERBY

By SID FEDER

Louisville, Ky., May 6 (AP)—They've been saying for a long time now that no dice game or roulette wheel was as big a gamble as racing horses, and as if there's any lingering doubt about it, take a look at the Texas kid with the Brooklyn accent—Derby-winner Assault.

The Derby darling with the deformed foot—bred by a Texan in Texas and trained by a Texan, but piloted by a jockey from Flatbush—takes a train ride to Baltimore today, trying to make history repeat.

If he gets the blackedey Susans at Pimlico Saturday, on top of the Roses he won so easily in the 72nd and richest Derby last week-end before the greatest crowd ever to see a horse race in America—more than 100,000—he'll be doing just what his daddy, Bold Venture, did a decade ago.

Wins by 8 Lengths

Last Saturday as an 8 to 1 shot, Assault set of a stick of Dynamite at Churchill Downs, and waltzed home by eight lengths. The photographs showed he wanted to run so much he pulled the little Brooklyn booter—Warren Mehrtens—clear out of the saddle trying to hold him in along the backstretch.

They paid him $96,400 for the job, and now he has a bankroll of $144,450.

In bouncing to the wire by the greatest Derby margin since Whirlaway, Assault became the horse to beat in the Preakness. But there'll be a couple of other fellows giving him a "rassle" for it.

Pulled Up Short

One will be William DuPont's Hampden. The Delaware dandy finished third Saturday, and would have been second, except Jockey Job Dean Jessop thought he saw the finish line before it arrived and started to pull up more than a sixteenth of a mile from home. He missed catching the sagging speed horse, Spy Song, by a couple of feet.

There'll also be the cosmetic couple—Lord Boswell and Knockdown from the barn of Mrs. Elizabeth Graham. Even money favorites, they finished fourth and fifth in the Derby, on which a new all-time one race record $1,202,474 was bet.

MARTIN URGES STRIKES ONLY AS LAST RESORT

Philadelphia, May 6 (AP)—Governor Martin told members of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor today that strikes "should be used as a last resort—and only after genuine efforts for collective bargaining, conciliation and voluntary arbitration have been made" in labor disputes.

Speaking before the AFL convention here, the executive said in a prepared address that "labor in America can out-produce the labor of any nation in the world because it is free to work where, when and how it pleases and at the job of its choice."

Lands War Record

"We want that plan of economy to continue," he declared. "The problems you face are worldwide in their importance and scope. We are confident that you will solve them for you have shown magnificent ability in shouldering grave responsibilities."

He complimented the federation's "proud war record" and emphasized that "it is the job of both labor and industry, working as a team, to solve" the new and hard problems of the postwar era.

"Our economic plan has given us conditions superior to those of any other great people," the governor said. "We know the strength of the free enterprise system that is so deeply rooted in the soil of America. Government has sometimes handicapped it by regulations but in the strain of war it proved itself the greatest production system in the history of man."

Three Inherent Rights

"For example, our Pittsburgh, the steel capital of the world, working under the free competitive enterprise system, turned out enough shells for the use of ourselves and our allies to literally blast the totalitarian governments from the face of the earth."

"At the moment, much of our industrial machinery for peace time production has been stalled by a wave of industrial disputes, work stoppages and strikes. Virtually every field of our national activity is affected. Normally that would not be an unhealthy sign because peaceful and orderly strikes are nothing more than growing pains in the national economic body."

"We recognize three inherent and inseparable rights of our people: the right to work where, when and at what we choose; the right to organize and bargain collectively and the right to strike."

COUPLE TO WED

A marriage license was issued at the court house to Charles Robert Buckley, Steinwehr avenue, son of Martin J. Buckley, Baltimore, and Miss Rita Veronica Hardman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hardman, Gettysburg.

There was no further resistance; the battle of the rock was ended.

Dead were two guards—one, Harold P. Stites, shot in a valiant early assault attempting to free hostages; the other, W. H. Miller, captured unarmed and killed when the blood-maddened felons turned their guns on their seven hostages. Miller had a key to the back door of the wing—but he threw it into an empty cell and died without revealing it.

Fourteen guards were wounded during the siege; so was one convict, James Groves, described as "a bystander."

Officials who disclosed this today said that so far no satisfactory replies have been received from Moscow. In fact, they added, Washington has been able to learn very little officially about what kind of agreements the Russians actually are making.

DAY LILIES ADD DASH OF COLOR IN SHADY SPOTS

Just as the artist uses high lights and shadows to bring out his best color effects, so does shade in the garden lend general interest, points out Erna W. Cass in the New York Herald-Tribune. Shady spots have many advantages, and these areas, often neglected and left unsightly, may be made attractive with a few of the right plants.

There are many perennials which cannot be grown to perfection without shade for at least part of the day. For assurance of bloom this summer, make selections immediately from your favorite nursery or seed catalogues and purchase well grown plants for setting out as soon as the weather permits.

For the shaded spot, where tall growing plants are needed, there is none lovelier than the stately day lilies (hemerocallis), which can be counted on to produce beauty, color and fragrance year after year. These hardy perennials have been favorites in gardens for generations. They are excellent placed among shrubs or planted in the border where they get good shade. These lily-like plants, which grow from one and one-half to four feet in height, produce handsome orange and yellow flowers in almost any kind of soil from May to early August, depending on the variety.

Early Flowering Types
For early flowering, a few of the many plants listed are: Dr. Regel, a fragrant, rich orange-yellow; Flava, a sweet-scented, clear full yellow, and Aureole, a golden yellow. Included among the later flowering varieties are Hyperion, one of the finest pale yellows; Margaret Perry, a brilliant orange-scarlet with a distinct yellow line running through each petal; J. A. Crawford, a rich apricot-yellow, and Mikado, which has a large spot of mahogany-red in each petal, contrasting sharply with the rich orange of the rest of the flower.

For those who enjoy surprises, the Leonian Hybrids should be of interest. These come in a riot of mixed colors but no yellows, with hardly any two alike. You can be sure they will be different from any you have seen and, as the plants become well established over the years, their perfection and magnificence increases. Thalictrum or meadow rue is another hardy perennial that does

Care Lessens Shock When Transplants Are Set Out

Whenever a plant is moved from one location to another it suffers a shock, and growth is checked until the plant recovers. Much study has been devoted to finding ways to lessen this shock. The points on which most authorities agree are:

When plants are moved the shorter the time between lifting and replanting the better.

Roots should not be disturbed more than is necessary; even to spread them out.

Water in which plant food has been dissolved to make a weak nutritive solution should be poured over bare roots before the plant is set and poured on the soil after planting when pot plants are used. Leaves should not be pruned, as this increases shock; only those that die need be sacrificed.

For the amateur, who has relatively few plants to set out, care taken in this task will be repaid by speed of recovery. A hole sufficiently large to contain the roots without crowding should be dug. At the bottom, mix a tablespoonful of balanced plant food with the soil, and throw in an inch of fresh soil to cover it. Then set the plant a little lower than it stood in the flat or pot, and fill in fine soil around the roots so that air pockets are excluded, and there is firm contact between the roots and soil. But merely firm, do not pound the soil, as compacting can be overcome.

By planting in cloudy weather, or in the evening, wilting may be avoided. If a considerable area of leaves is removed the shock to the plant will be increased.

In handling pot plants, or those started in plant bands, disturb the roots as little as possible. Do not compress the soil in which they are growing. This is usually moist and the temptation to mould it into a little mud ball is strong; but you may form a hard ball of soil from which the roots will be slow to emerge, with the result that the plant is stunted.

To prepare the nutrient starter solution, which will stimulate the plant and speed recovery from shock, stir a handful of your usual balanced plant food in a bucket of water. Pour a cupful of this over the bare roots of transplants, holding the plant over the hole in which it is to be set. In the case of pot plants, with soil undisturbed about the roots, pour on the starter solution after it has been planted.

Store Dressed Fowl—Because more favorable prices may result from gradual, orderly marketing of the large volume of hens being culled from laying flocks incident to the feed shortage, Harry H. Kaufman, extension poultry specialist of the Pennsylvania State college, suggests storing and freezing some of these chickens which have been converted into meat to avoid dumping all of them onto the market at one time.

Plantain Lilies Handsome
The plantain lilies formerly called funkia and botanically known as Hosta, produce a handsome effect quickly in shaded areas. These hardy, herbaceous perennials are noted for their green or variegated foliage, which makes fine accent plants at corners of beds or in foundation plantings, rock gardens and as edgings for driveways and lawns. The lily-like flowers of white, blue and lavender, which are borne on graceful spikes, bloom from May to September.

Where low-growing plants are desired for the border or rockery, the lovely coral bells (Heuchera sanguinea) cannot be surpassed. They grow from one to two feet high and the hybrids come in colors of white, pink, rose and crimson, with dainty bell-shaped blossoms which bloom from June until September. To insure a long blooming season, it is advisable to keep flowers picked. They also are excellent for cutting.

Other shade-loving perennials include aconitum, astilbe, dicentra, matensia, myosotis (forget-me-not), primula, trillium and violas. Where the shaded areas get some sun, a selection from the following might be helpful: anemone, aquilegia, Michaelmas daisy, campanula (bellflower), digitalis, eupatorium, hibiscus, iberis, oenothera (evening primrose), peony, physostegia, platyodon, troilus and veronica.

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
BEFORE TIME RUNS OUT

I am much more interested in how we are to feed the hungry of the world, educate the ignorant, and see the nations of the world get together as friends, than I am about the latest plan to blow up the world!

This is too beautiful a world for evil men to further despoil, and men and women are too valuable an asset to wantonly kill in selfish military and political disputes. Never in the history of the world have "the little people" cried and prayed for unselfish leaders to come to their rescue as now. Never have those in high authority been so challenged.

Never in the past has a grabbing nation long existed with either power or influence. And never will it long last. The sole hope of the world lies in orderly co-operation, with each nation as a good neighbor to the other, with respect for laws created for the protection of all.

What an example is offered in the two nations of the United States and Canada. Side by side they live in friendly intercourse, neither suspecting the other. Back and forth they have visited and done business together for over a hundred years—and not a single challenging gun, or fortress, along their thousands of miles of boundary! The greatest commodity of each is friendship.

The millions of heroic men and women, who lie in silent graves, have never voice nor vote in the high councils of those who now seek to make this a safe world for all—one in which peace and happiness may finally abide. Finality has sealed their lips. Nevertheless theirs is the most potent influence in the world. Did they die in vain or not?

Those who meet in the halls of discussion at the U.N.O., and those later to meet at the peace table, should be haunted day and night by the silent call of those who have no voice today. They represent the hungry, the homeless, and the millions now in hospitals, homes, and institutions, torn and broken by this cruelest of all creations—war! I should like to have hung over the deliberations of the U.N.O. hall, where the leaders of the world now meet, Lincoln's immortal words: "With malice toward none; with charity for all."

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Singleness of Mind"

SMALL BOY DELIGHT

Once there was a little boy, on cookie-baking day, who loitered near the kitchen instead of being at play. Some people thought he'd vanished, after twenty years or so, and left behind a grown-up, but that youngster wouldn't grow. Still on cookie-baking mornings, though his hair is turning gray.

He goes tip-toe to the kitchen in the old-time boyish way.

There's a lure to cookie baking and I'm certain it's the smell. It's that fragrance most enticing and it gets me, truth to tell. There's no other scent just like it. When I catch it on the air, my mouth begins to water, and enraptured, then and there, I drop all other business and go hastening to the spot.

Where I know they're baking cookies, for I want 'em while they're hot!

As that old-time little fellow, I stand reaching on the sly—Hoping cook won't sense my presence and my pilfering hand won't spy. As I snatch them from the paper, where to cool she's laid them out. But, "You know you'll spoil your dinner!" comes the long, familiar shout. Yes, there's gray about his temples; of his lifetime it is fall; But that cookie-loving youngster hasn't grown up after all.

FRENCH VOTERS GIVE LEFT WING SHARP SETBACK

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, May 6 (AP)—French voters, delivering the sharpest setback to the Left Wing bloc since the liberation of France, rejected a Communist-Socialist supported constitution in yesterday's referendum, complete official returns showed today.

Totals announced by the Ministry of the Interior indicated that the constitution was defeated by more than 1,180,000 votes. These figures, complete for the 93 departments of France, including all three in North Africa, gave:

Against the constitution—10,632,430.

For the constitution—9,450,570.

80 Per Cent Voted

Approximately 80 per cent of the registered voters participated. Defeat of the proposal means that France will elect a new constituent assembly June 2. This assembly will name a new provisional government and draft another proposed constitution for the Fourth Republic.

The Leftist-supported constitution would have established an all-powerful Legislature, empowered to appoint executive and judicial branches of the government.

The proposal was opposed bitterly by the Conservative Popular Republican movement (MRP) and other Right-Wing parties, on the grounds that it would give a virtual dictatorship to whatever faction won control of the Legislature.

Opponents of the measure also maintained that it failed to provide "checks and balances" necessary for a democracy, and pointed out that the president of France would be merely a figurehead.

Control Unsettled

The MRP and Gen. Charles De Gaulle, former president, had advocated a two-chamber Legislature, and strong executive and judicial branches of government. De Gaulle, now in retirement, did not have an elector's registration card and did not vote in the referendum.

The issue now arises anew as to whether any of the three major parties—Socialist, Communist or MRP—can gain control of the new provisional government, or whether there will be another coalition.

There was a strong indication that many Socialists either abstained from voting in the referendum or voted against the constitution. Belief was expressed by some observers that this might mean that the Socialist-Communist accord would crumble.

"For Rent" Sign Was A Mistake

Pittsburgh, May 6 (AP)—Incredulous househunters looked and looked again at the big red, white and black sign at the southwestern end of Neville Island. It read:

"For rent, 4 miles ahead, new apartments."

But it was all a mistake. Mrs. Owen Ruble, wife of the apartment manager, explained that winds had blown off a piece of burlap covering up the sign.

70 Years in Gettysburg

By DR. HENRY STEWART

The Water Supply

The first system appears to have been municipal (believe it or not). This is the obvious inference from the description in the 1884 History of Adams County. I am not sure that it is correct—the evidence is conflicting.

A history of the borough—with the borough ordinances published during Mr. Tipton's administration—says it was first proposed by Mr. Stevens, in 1822, introducing a resolution to contract for a water supply for the borough—and continued to press that subject and that it was greatly through his efforts that the old water works were constructed—no dates given.

But in May, 1843, five gentlemen made their bid for election to the council on a "platform" of opposition to the proposition to have water brought into the borough at the expense of the tax payers.

They were G. Armstrong, R. Smith, G. W. McClellan, A. B. Kurtz, and H. Denwillde. They were all members of the Council in 1843.

Conflicting Evidence

Again the same publication says the "present water works—by a private company"—seemingly to accent the change.

In October, 1845, a public meeting was called for the organization of a new Gettysburg Water company. As I said the conflict makes it impossible to say definitely what was the character of the original water company. Whatever its origin may have been—the water of one of the "Dobbin Springs" was used.

There were three in this group that still in evidence at the Dobbin House, one just north of the residence of Mr. C. J. Toot (which, for many years supplied a horse watering trough on the curb)—later for a long time undermined the gutter leading to Winebrenner's run, but now seems to have been effectively controlled, for there is a house built over it; and the one on the (late) Caldwell property in the angle of Baltimore street, and Steinhewer avenue. I always understood that this one was that used by the water company.

Logs for Pipes

The first pipes are said to have been logs—in several places have been unearthed—however, when I knew it they were (I think) 3 inch wrought iron pipes.

The main was carried north on Baltimore street to a point just short of the Methodist parsonage. There it turned east between that and the (then) Presbyterian parsonage (now the house built by S. M. Bushman), and thence around the hill, to a reservoir east of Stratton street, just northeast of the (now) Church of the Brethren (A suction pump was used in the kitchen of the Methodist parsonage).

The reservoir was (at a guess) 30 feet in diameter, covered with a masonry dome, sodded over.

First Lines Were Limited

Thence the water was led to sections of the town below its level. I have never seen any description of the extent of the distribution, but obviously it was to but a small portion of the town. As previously noted in 1869 it was extended out Carlisle street, beyond Stevens hall.

The balance of the town depended on its wells for drinking and cooking, and for other purposes there were a few cisterns, but generally the rain barrel, both filled by roof drainage.

And what an "institution" that rain-barrel was! Teeming with mosquito larvae—it was mighty fortunate for us that the anopheles and stegomyia were not indigenous—even at that it was bad enough, for window screens were a rare luxury.

and flies were everywhere. It is a wonder that we did not have more intestinal diseases than we did—for their role was not even dimly suspected.

Used "Fly Bush"

The "fly bush" was in wide use—sheets of tissue paper, varicolored, tacked on a slender rod, and then cut into narrow strips. A sort of a punkah was operated by Uncle Robert Sheads for his summer boarders, the length of the table. In the more pretentious houses you found large fans on the table, blades about three feet above it, driven by a spring actuated motor.

I well remember a farm house which we frequently visited in summer, one literally had to "shoo" the flies from one's food between the plate and the mouth.

The wells were generally what is classed as "deep." They were very uniformly found in the older parts of town on the center line of each 60-foot lot, consequently for the most part partnership wells. This was so uniformly constant that it suggests that the lots were originally sold with the requirement for the wells—though I have never found out any proof of this surmise.

Pumps An "Institution"

There were some exceptions to this location of wells and some were placed on the curb line—one at my place. There was one on the court house corner, three on the first square of Baltimore street, one in the northwest corner of the square, one on the second square of York street, (Herbsts), one on the first square of East Middle street (Chulps)—there is now an iron pump in it. There were probably others, but I do not remember them.

The reason for this I have never seen satisfactorily explained. It has been suggested that it was fire protection, but it would seem that they were too few and irregularly spaced for that to be accepted as a satisfactory explanation. One thing is certain—public use of them added materially to their upkeep cost to the property owner.

The pumps were themselves an "institution"—sections (at a guess) about eight feet long, fashioned from raw logs, on the spot. Many years ago I saw a repair gang at work on Baltimore hill (I should

Ivanhoe

By Sir Walter Scott

AP New Features

Chapter 29

A glance at the champion, however, served to destroy the hope that his timely arrival had excited. His horse, urged for many miles to its utmost speed, appeared to reel from fatigue, and the rider, however undauntedly he presented himself in the lists, either from weakness, weariness, or both, seemed scarce able to support himself in the saddle.

To the summons of the herald, who demanded his rank, his name and purpose, the stranger knight answered readily and boldly, "I am a good knight and noble, come hither to sustain with lance and sword the just and lawful quarrel of this damsel, Rebecca, daughter of Isaac of York; to uphold the doom pronounced against her to be false and ruthless, and to defy Sir Brian de Bois-Guilbert as a traitor, murderer, and liar, as I will prove in this field with my body against his, by the aid of God, of Our Lady and of Mounseigneur Saint George, the good knight."

"The stranger must first show," said Malvoisin, "that he is good knight, and of honorable lineage. The Temple sendeth not forth her champions against nameless men."

"My name," said the knight, raising his helmet, "is better known, my lineage more pure, Malvoisin, than thine own. I am Wilfred of Ivanhoe."

"I will not fight with thee at present," said the Templar, in a changed and hollow voice. "Get thy wounds healed, purvey thee a better horse, and it may be I will hold it worth my while to scourge out of thee this boyish spirit of bravado."

"Ha! proud Templar," said Ivanhoe, "hast thou forgotten that twice didst thou fall before this lance? Remember the lists of Acre—remember the passage of arms at Ashby—remember thy proud vaunt in the halls of Rotherwood, and the gage of your gold chain against my reliquary, that thou wouldst do battle with Wilfred of Ivanhoe, and recover the honour thou hadst lost! By that reliquary, and the holy relic it contains, I will proclaim thee, Templar, a coward in every court in Europe—in every preceptory of thine order—unless thou do battle without further delay."

Bois-Guilbert turned his countenance irresolutely towards Rebecca, and then exclaimed looking fiercely at Ivanhoe, "Dog of a Sax-on! take thy lance, and prepare for the death thou hast drawn upon thee!"

He descended into the lists, and commanded them to unhelm the

"Does the Grand Master allow me the combat?" said Ivanhoe.

"I may not deny what thou hast challenged," said the Grand Master, "provided the maiden accepts thee as her champion. Yet I would thou wert in better plight to do battle. An enemy of our order hast thou ever been, yet would I have thee honourably met with."

"Thus—as I am, and not otherwise," said Ivanhoe; "it is the judgment of God—to his keeping I commend myself. Rebecca," said he, riding up to the fatal chair, "dost thou accept of me for thy champion?"

"I do," she said, "I do," flattered by an emotion which the fear of death had been unable to produce. "I do accept thee as the champion whom Heaven hath sent me. Yet, no—no—thy wounds are unhealed. Meet not that proud man—why shouldst thou perish also?"

But Ivanhoe was already at his post, and had closed his visor, and assumed his lance. Bois-Guilbert did the same; and his esquire remarked, as he clasped his visor, that his face which had, notwithstanding the variety of emotions by which he had been agitated, continued during the whole morning of an ashy paleness, was now become suddenly very much flushed.

The Grand Master, who held in his hand the gage of battle, Rebecca's glove, now threw it into the lists, and pronounced the fatal signal words Laissez aller.

The trumpets sounded, and the knights charged each other in full career. The wearied horse of Ivanhoe, and its no less exhausted rider, went down, as all had expected, before the well-aimed lance and vigorous steed of the Templar.

This issue of the combat all had foreseen; but although the spear of Ivanhoe did but, in comparison, touch the shield of Bois-Guilbert, that champion, to the astonishment of all who beheld it, reeled in his saddle, lost his stirrups, and fell in the lists.

Ivanhoe, extricating himself from his fallen horse, was soon on foot, hastening to mend his fortune with his sword; but his antagonist arose not. Wilfred, placing his foot on his breast, and the sword's point to his throat, commanded him to yield him, or die on the spot. Bois-Guilbert returned no answer.

"Slay him not, Sir Knight," cried the Grand Master, "unshriven and unabsolved—kill not body and soul! We allow him vanquished."

He descended into the lists, and commanded them to unhelm the conquered champion. His eyes were closed—the dark red flush was still on his brow. As they looked on him in astonishment, the eyes opened—but they were fixed and glazed. The flush passed from his brow, and gave way to the pallid hue of death. Unconscious by the lance of his enemy, he had died a victim to the violence of his own contending passions.

"This is indeed the judgment of God," said the Grand Master, looking upwards—"Fiat voluntas tua!"

When the first moments of surprise were over, Wilfred of Ivanhoe demanded of the Grand Master, as judge of the field, if he had manfully and rightfully done his duty in the combat?

"Manfully and rightfully hath it been done," said the Grand Master; "I pronounce the maiden free and guiltless. The arms and the body of the deceased knight are at the will of the victor."

"I will not despoil him of his weapons," said the Knight of Ivanhoe, "nor condemn his corpse to shame—he hath fought for Christendom—God's arms, no human hand, hath this day struck him down. But let his obsequies be private, as becomes those of a man who died in an unjust quarrel."

New York, May 6 (P)—A threatened strike by 35,000 shipworkers set for midnight tomorrow in east Coast yards of the Bethlehem steel company was averted today when the company and the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding workers announced a contract agreement. The settlement provided an 18-cent-an-hour wage increase "at all yards on all work, retroactive to March 11, 1946," the joint statement said.

Philadelphia Wars On Black Marketers

Philadelphia, May 6 (P)— Seeking to check black market operations, the Philadelphia Police department has organized a squad of 22 special detectives.

George F. Richardson, inspector of detectives, said he believes some of the gangs which operated during prohibition days are now involved in black market dealings. He added that most of the racketeers come here from New York and Baltimore to dispose of hard-to-get foodstuffs, liquor, and luxury items.

Meanwhile the Office of Price Administration revealed it doubted its staff of meat black market agents in the past two months.

Mark Navy Planes With White Numbers

Philadelphia, May 6 (P)— As an aid to civilians seeking to identify violators of flying regulations, large white numbers have been painted on all aircraft at the U.S. Naval Air station at nearby Willow Grove, Pa.

Capt. C. M. Ewan, commanding officer of the station, said yesterday the navy has tightened its rules in an attempt to avert low-flying and other violations. Last week he announced four naval reserve fliers had been grounded permanently for low flying.

The navy is deeply alarmed over recent nationwide reports of hazardous flying," Ewan said. "It has taken every precaution to see to it that its personnel shall observe every precaution of safety."
